As part of a unique new partnership between a publisher and weekly radio broadcast, Church Publishing Incorporated (CPI) has developed and released a series of new, online church-group resources in conjunction with the popular radio program, Speaking of Faith® with Krista Tippett, produced by American Public Media.

Titled Speaking of Faith® for Small Groups™, the new program resources are designed for high school, young adult, and adult study groups and revolve around topical, interfaith conversations and interviews conducted by Krista Tippett on previously broadcast programs. Four modules of Speaking of Faith® for Small Groups™ are now available.

"This is a totally unique approach for contemporary discussions on life, meaning, and responsibility," said CPI vice president Pete Velander, who led the development and launch of Speaking of Faith® for Small Groups™ thru the company's Denver affiliate, Morehouse Education Resources. "Plus we're making it easy to sample and try. We're offering free sample recordings and study guides for each of the modules on our website, so church leaders and educators can see just how powerful and engaging these programs are, to say nothing of easy to use."

"Speaking of Faith® for Small Groups™ is part Christian formation, part community building, and totally stimulating and invigorating," said Velander. "It opens countless new doors into the types of conversations that change lives." Speaking of Faith® is public radio's conversation about religion, meaning, ethics and ideas. Each week, Peabody award-winning host Krista Tippett focuses on a different theme, asking writers, scientists, historians and others to discuss how religion shapes everyday life.
